

Logwin completes draw for interviews – Winners determined

Grevenmacher (Luxembourg) – Everything revolved around the topic of vocational training at Logwin's stand at the Aschaffenburg City Festival at the end of August. 17 of the logistics service provider's trainees were in charge of the stand approaching visitors to the City Festival and supplying information on the wide range of vocational opportunities in the company. In line with the topic, Logwin raffled off interviews for a trainee vacancy as part of a quiz – and the four winners have now been determined.

Logwin will be inviting three young men and a young woman to job interviews in the next few weeks. Whoever shows technical and personal aptitude has the opportunity to gain a vocational training place – for example as an assistant for forwarding and logistics or as a warehousing logistics specialist.

Logwin also had a surprise in store for those visitors who do not yet have to make their minds up about their future career – they could be photographed as a racing driver in the Logwin soapbox car and take their picture with them soon afterwards. The soapbox proved to be hugely popular, with over 320 children being made happy with a photograph.

(Inter-)national vocational training at Logwin

Logwin operates over 200 locations around the world. Its largest location is in Aschaffenburg, where the logistics service provider is a major employer. "Against this background the topic of vocational training is very important for us," says Joana Bätz, Director of Personnel Development at Logwin.

Logwin employs an average of 35 trainees at its Aschaffenburg location. Ten young people began their vocational training in Aschaffenburg on September 1 – six as assistants for forwarding and logistics services, two as office management assistants, one as a warehousing logistics specialist and one as an IT assistant. In addition, four students began their combined dual studies programme with periods of work experience at Logwin. Those who are particularly engaged and dedicated during their training have the opportunity to work for several weeks at a Logwin location abroad. Whether an international or national career, Logwin offers a variety of possibilities and fields of activity.
